Toronto, ON and New York, NY — October 8, 2026 — GO Residential Real Estate Investment Trust (“GO Residential REIT” or “GO”) (TSX: GO.U) today announced the filing of its management information circular (the “Circular”) and related voting materials in connection with its previously announced proposed indirect acquisition of a 27-property portfolio from H&R Real Estate Investment Trust (“H&R REIT”). The Circular has been filed in connection with a special meeting of GO unitholders, scheduled for November 13, 2026 (the “Special Meeting”), at which unitholders will be asked to approve the issuance of approximately 134.2 million trust units of GO as partial consideration for the Transaction. A copy of the Circular is available at www.sedarplus.ca under GO’s profile and at GO’s website at investors.goresidentialreit.com/transaction.

Upon closing, GO will own 13,026 residential suites across 35 residential properties in eight U.S. markets. GO is expected to be the second-largest publicly-traded residential real estate investment trust in Canada and the seventh-largest publicly-traded residential real estate investment trust in the United States, in each case by enterprise value as of June 30, 2026. A Property Book providing a comprehensive property-by-property description of the complete portfolio that will comprise the pro forma GO following closing was also filed by GO under its profile on SEDAR+ last week and is available on GO’s website.

In connection with the filing of the Circular, GO has issued a letter to unitholders outlining the strategic merits of the Transaction, and why GO’s board of trustees unanimously recommends unitholders vote FOR the resolution to approve the issuance of approximately 134.2 million trust units of GO to enable the Transaction to be completed. This letter is included below.

How to vote

Unitholder votes must be received by 11:00 am (Toronto time) on the proxy deadline date of November 11, 2026. the deadlines set by such brokers or intermediaries, which will be in advance of the proxy deadline date. Full details are included in the Circular.

LETTER TO GO UNITHOLDERS

Dear GO Unitholders:

On August 11, 2026, we announced an agreement to indirectly acquire a portfolio of 27 properties from H&R REIT. As founders and two of the largest individual trust unitholders of GO Residential REIT, we were thrilled to reach this agreement and are tremendously excited about the opportunity this represents for GO Residential REIT and our fellow unitholders. This Transaction is expected to fundamentally transform GO Residential REIT by providing a strengthened platform for value creation.

We are asking you to vote to approve the issuance of approximately 134.2 million trust units of GO Residential REIT to complete the Transaction, and we want to explain, directly and plainly, why we believe you should.

When we founded GO Residential REIT, we had a clear ambition: to build a premier luxury residential real estate investment trust. We began with five exceptional buildings in one of the strongest residential rental markets in North America. In our first twelve months as a public entity, we expanded operating margins, and we grew our initial portfolio from five properties in Manhattan to eight properties across New York City, with acquisitions of an additional two properties pending completion.

In conversation after conversation with our unitholders, the message has been consistent: GO Residential REIT is an exceptional platform constrained by its size, perceptions of concentration risk, limited trading liquidity and leverage. These are legitimate observations that have shaped our thinking about how to build on the foundation we have created with our unitholders' support. The Transaction answers many of the identified issues and establishes our path forward for creating value for unitholders into the future.

What this Transaction does:

The Transaction will see GO Residential REIT indirectly acquire 27 properties from H&R REIT, comprising:

- 23 Sunbelt residential communities managed under the Lantower brand,
- an approximate 50% interest in Jackson Park (a luxury high-rise in Long Island City),
- a 50% interest in River Landing in Miami,
- a Class A office tower at Two Gotham Center in New York City, and
- a mixed-use commercial and office asset in Dallas.

Upon completion of the Transaction, GO Residential REIT will own 13,026 residential suites across 35 properties in eight U.S. markets. We will be the second-largest publicly-traded residential real estate investment trust in Canada and the seventh-largest publicly-traded residential real estate investment trust in the United States, in each case, by enterprise value as of June 30, 2026. We strongly believe that the transition from a small-cap real estate investment trust to a larger-capitalization real estate investment trust will enable GO Residential REIT to capitalize on new opportunities and compete with other major players in the real estate industry.

Why we believe this is the right transaction, at the right time:

- High-Quality, Class A Portfolio at an Attractive Basis. The properties to be acquired pursuant to the Transaction will complement GO Residential REIT's existing trophy New York City portfolio with Class A properties acquired at an attractive basis relative to estimated replacement cost and private market values. Upon completion of the Transaction, we expect to continue to have among the highest average monthly rental rates of any publicly-traded residential real estate investment trust in Canada or the United States, supporting sustained income growth and reflecting the quality and desirability of our assets. In addition, GO Residential REIT is expected to own a modern portfolio, averaging just 11 years in age, that is among the newest of its Canadian and U.S. public residential real estate investment trust peers. The implied acquisition basis represents an attractive entry point on both a per-unit and a capitalization-rate basis relative to comparable asset transactions and replacement cost, providing GO Residential REIT with meaningful embedded value from day one.
- Accretive to FFO Adjusted and AFFO Adjusted Earnings. The Transaction is expected to be accretive to our FFO Adjusted per Unit and AFFO Adjusted per Unit, supported by approximately US$15 million of expected annualized transaction synergies derived from property-level margin enhancement, procurement efficiencies and overhead and operational integration that are expected to be realized within 12 to 18 months following completion of the Transaction. Today, our distribution coverage and resulting AFFO Adjusted payout ratio are strong. Tomorrow, we believe they will be even stronger by virtue of this expected accretion. In addition, unitholders will benefit from approximately US$51 million of additional consideration from CRAL Class B Limited, a company controlled by members of the family of Thomas J. Hofstedter, Executive Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of H&R REIT, during approximately the first two years following the consummation of the Transaction. We expect the additional consideration will provide greater certainty around cash flows during the initial ownership period, and a bridge to the portfolio's expected stabilized earnings power.
- Strengthened Balance Sheet and Enhanced Financial Flexibility. Upon completion of the Transaction, our debt-to-EBITDA ratio is expected to decrease by more than two times, with further potential reductions from additional consideration provided pursuant to the Transaction and expected post-closing synergies. The strengthened balance sheet is expected to serve as a foundation for flexibility that can potentially be utilized to realize additional value creation.
- Diversification into High-Growth Sunbelt Markets with Continued Focus on New York City. The Transaction increases GO Residential REIT's exposure to our hometown market – New York City – and provides a presence in three Sunbelt states – Florida, Texas and North Carolina – that we expect to deliver long-term value to unitholders. This diversification is neither a reflection of a change in our outlook for New York City nor an indication of an intention to enter new markets purely on the basis of value. In fact, New York City is expected to account for approximately 70% of the GO Residential REIT portfolio's NOI. We expect New York City to continue to be one of the strongest residential markets in North America and did not take the decision to enter other markets lightly. Tampa, Orlando, Miami, Dallas, Austin, Raleigh-Durham and Charlotte possess underlying supply and demand drivers that are expected to provide for sustainable long-term growth. They represent the exact type of markets that we would be willing to expand beyond New York City for and this Transaction provides for the opportunity to do so in a risk-adjusted manner.
- Diversification Across Highly Attractive Property Types. The post-Transaction portfolio is also expected to benefit from asset type diversification. The pro forma residential asset mix is comprised of high-rise assets (39%), Class A urban-adjacent multifamily assets (48%) and Class A mid-rise new-construction assets (13%). This strategic weighting is expected to support strong pricing power, low credit risk and high retention, and an institutional-grade platform positioned for operational performance. Let us be clear on one point, however – this Transaction does not mark a strategic shift into non-residential assets. The office and commercial assets being acquired are non-core and we do not expect to strategically target these classes going forward.

- Enhanced Trading Liquidity and Capital Markets Profile. The Transaction is expected to increase our equity float by approximately fourfold from current levels. This expanded float, together with our institutional-grade scale, is anticipated to improve daily trading liquidity and strengthen the platform's attractiveness to large-scale institutional investors.

Where we are today, versus where we are going:

We have seen the market reaction since we announced this Transaction, and we take it seriously. Our significant personal investments in GO Residential REIT date back to before our initial public offering. Our personal investments have continued to grow in the months since going public and we want to be clear that our conviction and confidence in this story have not diminished. Our convictions have only grown by virtue of the opportunity that now sits before us.

This Transaction represents a potential turning point for GO Residential REIT. It represents the transformation into a scaled, more diversified structure designed to promote stronger and more sustainable long-term growth and the transition into a larger-capitalization real estate investment trust with balance sheet flexibility meant to support greater value creation. From the beginning, our vision has been to build a real estate investment trust and an investment opportunity for the long term. We believe this Transaction is a critical step in that journey, and we are standing behind that belief with our own capital.

What we are asking:

Our board of trustees unanimously recommends that you vote FOR the resolution to approve the issuance of the GO Residential REIT units in connection with this Transaction. We have also entered into support and voting agreements committing to vote our trust units in favour of the Transaction. Each trustee and executive officer of GO Residential REIT that holds trust units or rights to acquire trust units has made the same commitment. In asking for your support, we are not asking you to do something we are unwilling to do ourselves.

A simple majority of votes cast is required for the resolution to pass. Your vote matters. If you hold your trust units through a broker or intermediary, please contact them directly to ensure your instructions are recorded. Proxies submitted in favour of the resolution by the deadline described in the Circular will be voted accordingly.

The Circular contains a full description of the Transaction, the background to the Transaction and the reasons for the board of trustees' recommendation, among other matters. We encourage you to read it and vote in favour of the resolution to approve the issuance of the GO Residential REIT units in connection with this Transaction.

There are different ways to submit your voting instructions depending on whether you are a registered unitholder or a beneficial unitholder.
